CLINICAL PATHOLOGY

TEST	VALUE	UNIT	REFERENCE
URINE PREGNANCY TEST	Negative

Interpretation

1. If the pregnancy test is taken too early one may get a false negative result very dilute urine specimen may not contain a representative level of HCG, resulting in a negative test too.
2. If pregnancy is still suspected, first morning specimen should be collected 48 hours later and tested.
3. A test result that is weakly positive should be confirmed by retesting with a first-morning urine specimen collected 48 hours later.
4. A number of conditions other than pregnancy, including trophoblastic disease and non-trophoblastic neoplasm cause elevated levels of HCG resulting in a false positive test.
5. The result should be correlated with clinical and ultrasound findings.
